Begräbnisgesang

op. 13 (1858)

Michael Wieße

Nun laßt uns den Leib begraben, Bei dem wir kein'n Zweifel haben, Er werd' am letzten Tag aufstehn, Und unverrücklich herfür gehn.

Erd' ist er und von der Erden, Wird auch wieder zu Erd' werden,
Und von Erden wieder aufstehn, Wenn Gottes Posaun' wird angehn.

Seine Seel' lebt ewig in Gott,
Der sie allhier aus seiner Gnad'
Von aller Sünd und Missetat Durch seinen Bund gefeget hat.

Sein' Arbeit, Trübsal und Elend
Ist kommen zu ein'm guten End, Er hat getragen Christi Joch,
Ist gestorben und lebet noch.

Die Seel', die lebt ohn' alle Klag', Der Lieb schläft bis am letzten Tag,
An welchem ihn Gott verklären Und der Freuden wird gewähren.

Hier ist er in Angst gewesen, Dort aber wird er genesen,
In ewiger Freude und Wonne Leuchten wie die schöne Sonne.

Nun Lassen wir ihn hier schlafen, Und gehn Allsamt unser Straßen, Schicken uns auch mit allem Fleiß, Denn der Tod kommt uns gleicher Weis.

Burial Song

op. 13 (1858)

Michael Weisse

Let us now inter this body over which we have no doubts:
it will rise on Judgement Day and confidently go forth.

He is earth and of the earth,
to earth he will return,
and from earth will rise again when God's trumpets sound.

His soul forever lives in God, who of his grace has cleansed it here of all misdeeds and sins through his covenant.

His toil, travail and distress have come to a peaceful end; he has shouldered Christ's yoke, has died but lives on.

The soul lives free of all lament,
The body sleeps till that last day on which God will transfigure him and grant him joy.

He has here borne anguish, but there will be restored and shine like the glorious sun in eternal joy and bliss.

Now we leave him here to sleep, and together go our ways;
let us prepare ourselves with all care for death come to us likewise.
